School days, school days...

Back to school! That's the order for your children now. Back to school, to mingle with old school friends and meet many new ones.

Friends or not, other children naturally carry germs on them... cold germs... disease germs. You want to protect your children against infection.

All right, feed them plenty of milk. Because milk is Nature's own tonic. It builds up resistance, fortifies against infection. Healthful vitamins do the trick, with nourishment that is the most nearly complete you can buy for the money.

4 glasses of milk a day for every child is the order of health—and it's much cheaper, in the long run, than a spell of sickness. So start your children now drinking more milk. It's good for them!

Rumors Over Proposed Mergers Set The Automobile World Agog

By The Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 11.—The automobile world is agog over rumors of proposed mergers in the industry.

It will not be surprising if several companies see fit to unite within the next twelve months—first, to strengthen their production facilities and second, to improve their retail outlets.

For one thing, the automobile industry is a highly competitive one. It is a fact that the industry is a highly competitive one. It is a fact that the industry is a highly competitive one.

The latest figures on passenger car registrations show that thus far in 1934, the top eight on new sales are: Ford, 358,240; Chevrolet, 335,600; Plymouth, 197,150; Dodge, 159,425; Pontiac, 150,313; Oldsmobile, 143,517; Hudson, 139,773; Buick, 138,814.

Thus, of these eight, all but one—Hudson—belong under the wing of the big three. Going a step further, the ninth producer is Studebaker with 127,536, and the tenth producer Chrysler with 126,298.

During the period in question, total registrations for the top ten were 1,223,881. General Motors, Ford and Chrysler units accounted for about 95 per cent of these passenger car sales.

The independents, for one thing, have not been equipped to compete in the low-priced field. And that is the major portion of the automobile business today.

Any mergers that are projected during the next twelve months, therefore, are certain to bring together companies that want to improve their positions in the lower price brackets. Any such combines will be designed to give dealers a better sales field in which to work.

Both General Motors and Chrysler have benefited immensely by putting at the disposal of dealers cars in several class groups. General Motors has teamed up Buick and Pontiac in the hands of many dealers. Chrysler has given both Dodge and De Soto contracts to the same dealers, while the Plymouth is handled as a complete line by almost every Chrysler, Dodge and De Soto dealer.

Both the General Motors and Chrysler organizations have been able to point to the wisdom of such a policy by expanding sales and richer profits for the dealers.

Ford never has permitted his dealers to sell cars bearing any other trade name. A Ford dealer must sell only Fords. Nevertheless, the fact that the Ford project has been balked at by limitations of this kind, in good years and bad, the

Boarding Houses Did a Big Business

By The Associated Press

The boarding houses in Waterbury, Conn., did a big business during the summer months.

Most of the reports state that they have had the best season in some years. The board receipts have also shown large crowds.

With the new No. 32 route now open, hundreds of people from all parts of the country are passing through these towns.

The new business that has been published by the township of Rosenburg has proved to be a drawing card for a great many tourists, from New York city and other parts of the state.

The opening of the new route has also added much to the convenience of those who come into Kingston to do their trading. It affects other cities such as Newburgh, Middletown and others in the vicinity.

Many New Yorkers have made arrangements to build cottages along No. 32 for next season. In fact, the residents of Rosenburg look for even a bigger season next year and plan to fix up their homes in the most attractive manner.

AGRICULTURE—The washing-away of soil from farm lands has resulted in the destruction of thirty-five millions of acres for agricultural purposes.

Cornell bulletin E-273 tells how to kill a beef or veal. Copies may be obtained from the New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, New York.

Estimates place the cash income from the sale of farm products in July at $498,000,000, including $20,000,000 rental and benefit payments under the AAA and $11,000,000 for the emergency purchases of cattle in drought areas.

Farmers who have surplus hay to sell are urged to list the amount, kind, and quality with the central office of the New York state farm bureau federation at the state college of agriculture at Ithaca, New York.

The potato crop in New York state this year is nearly normal. The August 1 estimate for 1934 is nearly twenty-four million bushels as compared with a little more than twenty-five million bushels for the past five-year average.

DeWitt Lake Season Drawing to a Close

By The Associated Press

The summer residents at DeWitt Lake are closing up their cottages after an enjoyable summer and are preparing to return to their homes in various parts of the state.

Mr. and Mrs. Mooney of Lake Island left for their home yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts of the Bronx are leaving Monday for New York city. Dr. Janzen and his family are also leaving Monday.

The Woodstock Churches community have arranged for a picnic picnic at the lake next Wednesday and the Lions Club of Newburgh will entertain the ladies at a picnic on September 15. These festivities will wind up the season.

World's Chemicals—About 15 per cent of the world's chemicals are manufactured in countries which in 1913 had no important chemical manufacture.

Flavoring Sauces for Fish and Meat—Just Add.. GULDEN'S Mustard

Chief Engineer Tells of Taking off in Boat

and went to a deck to see if the fire was working. Then I went my way down to B and C decks. I met some of the crew help-

"Let the third assistant engineer go to deck. How are things? I asked. Smith said he was all right."

"Let anyone leave the engine room? I asked. He said he was sure to shut down the engines and leave things in order."

"I went back to the top deck then and reported to the captain on the bridge. I told him things were going down there and I didn't know how the men could stay. I saw a lot of smoke in my lungs by then."

"Were the electric lights still on?" I asked. He said they were. "And the emergency lighting set work?"

"It failed, sir. It was the first time the emergency lighting set failed, sir, because the cables were cut. I had cut in automatically the regular lighting system set off."

"Don't you think," asked Smith, "that it was strange the oilers, water tenders and men working down below were not called?"

"The alarm called them."

"Were the water tenders and oilers asleep?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where were the engine room oilers?"

"They took their posts at the engines and fire rooms."

"Did you see the fire in the social hall?"

"Yes, sir, from the outside—it was all flame."

"Did you go in?"

"I was too busy. I was trying to get to the engine room."

"In your mind, if they had put a hose with pressure of 100 pounds a square inch on the social hall, don't you think they could have knocked down that fire?"

"No sir—not with 100 hose when I seen it."

"Did any of your men help passengers?"

"I helped some."

"Did you close the bulkheads down below?"

"No sir, we were afraid that the men below would never be able to get out. My crew and my engineers were good, I know they were true."

"Did you leave the fire pump running?"

"Yes, sir, we did. It was running all the time."

"You had about 300 pounds pressure on your boilers then didn't you?"

"About that."

"What were your orders from the bridge?"

"One was astern and one ahead."

"One engine astern and one ahead?"

"Yes, sir, to work the ship around."

"Was the telephone communication to the bridge working?"

"Yes, sir. It was intact."

"How about the engine room telegraph?"

"It burned out."

"No trouble with machinery?"

"Never—on that ship."

"Why weren't the men below told when fire was discovered?"

"I can't tell that."

No Friction, He Says

"Was there any friction between the engine room and the bridge?"

"No, sir."

Abbott said the Morro Castle was "more than a ship to me."

"She was like my child," he said in a hoarse quivering voice.

"She went through hurricanes without any trouble. I knew every bolt and rivet in her. I was on her over five months on tests."

Hoover turned the questioning back to the time of the fire.

"When did you wake?"

"About 3 o'clock."

"Did you go to the engine room first?"

"No, sir, I went to the first officer's room to see if he was up."

"Did you at any time go to the engine room?"

"No, sir, I did not."

"Why not?"

"I telephoned and everything was in perfect order. Then I tried to work my way down, but I trapped myself among the passengers and tried to direct the hoses."

"Was it possible to get down to the engine room?"

"Hesitating—"Yes, sir, it was."

"When did the pumps fail?"

"They did not fail."

"In what way did you come off the ship?"

"I reported to the bridge and the captain told me to take No. 1 lifeboat. I got it off."

"Do you know if you were first out?"

"I think No. 3 and 5 were away."

"Was the fire burning then?"

"It was raging and all the lights were off."

"When you got into the boat was there any water being played on the fire?"

"Some I think, but not very much."

"Who was in that boat besides yourself?"

"22 altogether."

"Any passengers?"

"Two sir."

"All the rest were of the crew then?"

"Yes sir. One was Dr. Cochrane and a lady passenger."

"What I want to know," Hoover said sternly, "why No. 1 boat did not take off more passengers?"

Saw No Passengers

"When I left A deck, there were no passengers on deck. Anyone below must have jumped up. We saw no passengers. There were none in sight."

"How long did all this take place after you awoke at 3 o'clock?"

"Not more than half an hour—a half an hour at the most."

"What I am concerned about," insisted Hoover, "is if you made any attempt to take off passengers."

"We didn't see any."

"And not seeing any passengers, you didn't make any attempt to find passengers?"

"I don't know about that—I was ordered to take the boat off."

"Chief," asked Hoover, "have you ever had any difficulty with your crew?"

"Never, sir."

His engineer's pride then asserted itself and his voice rang loud when he told how "every passenger who ever came into the engine room complimented us."

"What theory have you as to how the fire started?"

Abbott took a long time in answering.

"It was such a big fire," he said, "I couldn't be sure. Some said something about a ball of fire, but I couldn't be sure."

Asked what he believed to be the pressure on the fire hoses, Abbott said it was 100 pounds a square inch. He had no evidence, he added, there was ever a failure of the pumps.

"If they told about the fire," Abbott said, "we in the engine room knew nothing about it."

"Could it have been stopped when those on deck reported it?"

"No, sir—when I saw that fire I said to myself 'It's too late now.'"

Hoover questioned Abbott about the fire resisting bulkheads in the ship. They went all the way through every deck, he said.

He said he did not believe the doors in the fire screens were shut.

"I know the door between the lounge and the library was open because I saw it on my way down."

"Could it have been closed then?"

"Never, sir. And I think it was better to leave bulkhead doors open, because if they were closed those passengers on C deck would have been trapped and could have never escaped."

"What," asked Hoover, "was the material in the cabin walls between the two main steel fire resisting bulkheads?"

"Wood and beaverboard and possibly some other light composition I believe."

Hoover turned to inquiries concerning the electrical installation. Abbott, under questioning, said the social hall fire would readily burn into the systems and destroy the emergency set.

Abbott said there was no kerosene on board, because the company did not permit its use on the ship.

No Fire Below C Deck

Crone elicited from Abbott the statement that there was no fire below C deck. It was on A deck and B deck, he said and never got below while he was aboard. This would limit it to the super-structure.

"What time did the engine room force leave the engine room?" Crone asked.

"Somewhere between 3:15 and 3:30," he answered.

It was impossible for them to stay there in the smoke and fumes because the fire was burning so fast."

He said by the time he got to the engine room, where he met his first assistant, the engines had stopped and the anchor had to be dropped.

I told the engine-room force not to leave under any circumstances until I was impossible to live."

Abbott said the captain ordered Second Officer Clarence Hackney to lower the boats. He lowered No. 1 boat, which the captain told me to take away."

He was then excused.

Third Assistant Engineer.

Arthur Stamper, 28, third assistant engineer who was on watch at the time of the fire, was then called. Everything was working perfectly in the engine room, Stamper testified.

"The first I knew that there was fire aboard was when the telephone rang and someone told me."

"The first alarm rang about that time. It was about three o'clock."

"The smoke began to come down into the engine room."

Stamper said he stopped the force draught ventilation system for a few minutes and the smoke seemed to "get worse" and he started the motor again.

"The first order we got from the bridge was a standby. Then came a slow down order."

"What time did you decide to leave the engine room?"

"Soon after the lights went out. The smoke got so dense."

"Did you have ample time to shut the stops on the main boilers?"

"No, sir, the smoke was too thick."

Stamper said he tried in vain to call the bridge and the chief engineer by telephone to find out how serious the fire was. The bridge telegraph was also out of order.

"There was never any trouble in the engine room," Stamper said.

Stamper related he escaped from the burning ship by jumping overboard after daylight.

He said he heard passengers screaming on the decks as attempts were being made to reach the lifeboats.

"Many were panicky."

There were no passengers in sight when he left the vessel, Stamper said.

Water pressure on the fire lines was maintained at 100 pounds until he left the engine room, Stamper testified.

He said he knew of no failure of the pressure on any upper decks.

"My men left the engine room just ahead of me. I left after calling out to make sure everybody was out of the engine and fire rooms."

Asked about gas masks, Stamper said there was only one in the engine room and it was not used.

The hearing recessed for lunch in the midst of Stamper's story.

GRAF FLIES OVER AS FRENCH REPEL GERMAN INVASION

Beaune, France, Sept. 11. (AP) While French troops executed maneuvers today to thwart an imaginary invasion from Germany, the Graf Zeppelin, which had appeared out of the mist.

The air liner, en route to South America, flew at an altitude of more than 1,000 feet, its passengers looking down on the war games. The French soldiers, though all equipped in death struggle to prevent an attack from the direction in which the Graf came, cranked their necks as the Graf disappeared in the distance.

Air Mail Suit

Washington, Sept. 11. (AP) The controversy growing out of Postmaster General Farley's cancellation of the air mail contracts was carried to the Supreme Court today by the Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc. The big air line petitioned the court to review the decision of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals which refused to restrain the postmaster general from carrying out his program pursuant to the cancellation order.

Blazing Hulk Of The Morro Castle Still Considered A Menace

ASTORIA, Sept. 11. (AP) The blazing hulk of the Morro Castle today was still considered a thing of menace to be in sight with impunity.

Threat of further explosions in the burning hulk was one of the reasons a strict curfew of shore based officials in issuing orders to patrol city firemen around.

As a precautionary measure, the beach near the wreck was ordered closed to all persons. For a distance of several hundred feet, the boardwalk was also closed to spectators.

Fire raged in the forepeak and forward hold of the Morro Castle, and it was feared the keel.

Captain William A. Hall, representative of the Ward Line, which operated the liner, and Acting Fire Chief William S. Taggart feared that the flames might reach the ship's fuel tanks which are filled.

Yesterday, there were two blasts on the wrecked boat. Firemen were feared lest another explosion rip out some of the ship's weakened plates and hurl them on shore.

As spectators withdrew from the danger zone, the bow of the Morro Castle was smoking heavily.

A serio-comic touch was supplied this morning by two boys from Glen Cove, N. Y.

A Coast Guard sentry, standing watch over the wreck on Conventual Hall pier, thought he saw some one moving on the smoking hull. It might have been an illusion; nevertheless, he called over the emergency telephone set up on the other pier, but no one was seen.

High seas threatened the burning hulk today. The waves were high and the wind was strong. The ship was tilted to one side and the flames were seen to leap higher.

There had been no sign of a rescue party from the pier.

Some of the firemen were weighted down with ropes that they dragged over the side of the pier. They had no other tools and no ladders.

The firemen were ordered to remain on the pier and not to attempt to climb the burning hulk.

In police court Judge William A. Andrews dismissed the boys with a reprimand. "Don't ever do it again," he said.

WHEN WORLDS COLLIDE

By EDWIN BALMER & PHIL WYLLIE

Synopsis of Preceding Installment:

INSTALMENT 39

Ever called to the child, and it ceased crying; so Eve had to call again for a response that would guide her to it in the dark.

There were two children, together and alone. They were three and four years old. It appeared they knew their names—Dan and Dorothy. They called for "Papa-Papa," it appeared, had brought them there in the dark and gone away. Papa had told them to stay there, and somebody would come.

Eve had her arms between the wires, and the children clinging to her hands while they talked. Now Tony took them over the wires,
and Eve took them in her arms.
The little girl asked if she was "Mamma." Mamma, it appeared, had gone away a long time ago.

"Months ago only," Eve interpreted for Tony, "for they wouldn't remember her."

"Yes. Probably in the destruction of the first passage," Tony said; and they both understood that the mother must be dead.

"He brought them here to us," Eve said; and Tony understood that too. It was plain enough.
Some father, who had heard of the camp and the Space Ships, had brought his children here and left them—going away, asking nothing for himself.

Clear and loud in the night, a bugle blew; and Tony and Eve both started.

"Gabriel's horn," muttered Tony.
"The last trumpet!"

"Father advanced the time," returned Eve. "He decided to give a few minutes more of warning;
or else he fooled me, too."

"You are carrying that child?"
asked Tony. Eve had the little girl.

"Yes," said Eve. "You are carrying the boy?"

"Yes," said Tony. "Rules or no rules, necessities or no necessities, if we can take sheep and goats, I guess we can take these two."

"I guess so," said Eve; and she strode strongly beside him into the edge of illumination as the great floodlights blazed out.

The buildings were all alight;
and everybody was bustling.
The loading of the two Arks long ago had been completed. The passengers ran back and forth, calling, crying, shaking hands, embracing one another.

They were all to go; every one in sight was bustling on the Space Ships; but some would be on one ship, some on the other. Would they meet again—on Bronson Beta?
Would either ship get there?

Tony, hurrying to his station, appreciated how wisely Hendron had acted in deceiving them all—even himself—as to the night. Here he was, second in command of the first Space Ship, carrying a strange child in contravention of all other orders. The chief commander's daughter also carried a child.

No one stopped them. Not Hendron himself. It was the last hour on earth, and men's minds were rocking.

The bugles blew again; and Tony deposited the boy with Eve, set about his business of checking the personnel of his ship. Three hundred yards away, Dave Randall checked the personnel of his larger party.

Randall, for a moment, ran over.
He asked for Hendron, but he sought, also, Eve. Tony did not interfere; he allowed them their last minutes together.

A third time the bugles blew.
Tony completed his check of crew and passengers. Twice he blew his whistle.

From off to the right, where the second ship lay, Dave Randall's signal answered.

N-E-W-S

Munitions

Washington, Sept. 10.—The trouble behind the senatorial arms investigation is that no one knows what can be done about it.

Back in the minds of senatorial investigators is an unspoken idea that they will recommend legislation for stricter Federal regulation of domestic arms traffic. If not outright government ownership and operation.

But they know even that will not be satisfactory, and probably will not be authorized by Congress.

The problem is international, not domestic. Any step we take to break up our end of the arms selling racket would only give the British, French and other racketeers a freer field in the business. Embargo against our manufacturers would be grand, idealistic gestures.
But they would be practical only if other nations would follow suit. No one who knows the subject is riddling himself into believing that there is any chance of other governments adopting the idea.

The European governments are so closely tied up with their munitions manufacturers that the two are indistinguishable.

Outcome

For these reasons, and others, the investors expect the current investment to amount to a publicity field day—and nothing more. There is just a vague chance that the disclosures will frighten the foreign governments and their arms men into making some concessions, but that is admittedly an outside chance.

It is no news that the munitions makers try to bicker international peace conferences. The story about their effort to stir up war among smaller countries is likewise an old one. Even the revelations of specific graft caused few eyebrows to be raised here.

Nearly everyone able to read knows that the greasing of palms is still too common a practice especially below the Rio Grande. It is hardly a secret that many American businessmen, in more praiseworthy endeavors, have found that they are not considered "sympathetic" in some parts of Latin America unless they carry a black satchel along.

Governmental insiders say Henry Ford started out a few years ago to get South American business for his automobiles on a Sunday school basis, but he did not get very far.

Sidelines

There is another angle to the international arms traffic yarn. Wars are fought with more than weapons.
Only a chosen few know it, but Japan has for years been building up oil reserves with purchases mainly from one of our largest oil companies. All the guns and ammunition in her navy would be just so much scrap iron and waste without oil to run her vessels, as she has no domestic oil supply.

Japan has also bought heavily of cotton, steel and nitrates. She has stocks of all these products on hand to make her own arms and ammunition.

All are sold freely in international trade and are just as necessary to war as guns.

Seaworthy officials here cannot say so out loud, but they believe something should be done about revising practices of the sea.

Captains of commercial vessels too often consider a dollar before they consider a life. Their primary responsibility is to the owners of the ship who pay their salaries, and only secondarily to the people entrusted to their care.

Frequently they delay the sending of SOS signals until all hope is gone. It costs money to send an SOS which diverts traffic for rescue work. Commercial prestige also is involved. Likewise, they seldom beach or abandon a ship, because salvage work is expensive.

In thinking this way, officials are not talking particularly about the Morro-Casle disaster. They cannot know the facts in that case until an investigation is concluded.

That merely started them to thinking about what should be done, although they have no idea that anything will be done. You cannot repeal the law of nature.

Foreign Trade

You may have noticed that all these recently announced tariff agreements were not with large countries.

There is a general supposition among the boys backstage that there will not be any deals announced with big nations until after the November election. There is a method in that. When big trades are made (if any ever are) they will have an influence on domestic tariffs. These little trades have little or no effect.

The tariff is such a warm political issue that the New Dealers would not stir up a hornet's nest if they fooled with it now.

Soldier-politicians figure the Miami

Can I not attend? Here I am—Suddenly he let go of Henderson's hand and stopped dancing. He bowed very gravely. First to Henderson, then to Tony, then to the crew. "Gentlemen," he said, "let's be going. Let's be on our way."

Henderson turned to Tony, who in reacting burst into a paroxysm of laughter. For an instant the French scientist looked deeply wounded;
then suddenly he began to laugh.
"I am ridiculous, am I not?" he shouted. He roared with laughter.
He rocked with it.

"What about the ships that were being built in other countries in Europe?" Henderson asked him.

"The English?" returned Duquesne. "They will get away. What then, who knows? Can you 'mangle' through space, Cole 'Endron'? I ask it. But the English are sounder; they have a good ship. But as to them, I have made my answer. I am here."

"The Germans?" demanded Henderson.

The Frenchman gestured. "Too advanced. They have tried to take every contingency into account—too many contingencies! They will make the most beautiful voyage of all—or by far the worst. As to all the other, again I observe, I have preferred to be here."

Pierre Duquesne, France's greatest physicist, went off with Henderson to the control-room, talking volubly. Tony superintended the closing of the lock. He went up the spiral staircase to the first passenger deck. Fifty people lay there on the padded surface with the broad belts already strapped around their legs and torsos. Most of them had not yet attached the straps intended to hold their heads in place.
Their eyes were directed toward the glass screen, where alternately views of the heavens overhead and of the radiant landscape outside the Space Ship were being shown.

Tony looked at his number and found his place. Eve was near by him, with the two children beside her. She had sat up to welcome him. "I've been terribly nervous.
Of course I knew you'd come, but it has been hard waiting here."

"We're all set," Tony said, as he adjusted himself on the floor harnesses.

Below, in the control-room, the men took their posts. Hendron strapped himself under the glass screen. He fixed his eyes to an optical instrument, across which were two hair lines. Very close to the point of their intersection was a small star. The instrument had been set so that when the star reached the center of the cross, the discharge was to be started. About him was a battery of switches which were controlled by a master switch, and a lever that worked not unlike a rheostat over a series of resistances. His control-room crew were fastened in their places with their arms free to manipulate various levers. Duquesne had taken the place reserved for one

Bright Outlook for Stone Ridge School

Feminine Bob Getting Longer, Stylist Claims

Stone Ridge, Sept. 11.—I was pleased to read in The Freeman of recent date that the Stone Ridge school, under its new management, gives promise of continuing to do work which has been done for years, under the leadership of Mrs. Schoonmaker, that the new management necessary by the new system of teaching and management must be made in every school, and that the new order, beginning made now in the beginning of the new order. This work was started last year in the primary department by Mrs. Elmer Roosa and that the result was very satisfactory was shown by the fact that the superintendent of rural work in the New Paltz Normal School commended it highly. This on transportation, government, etc., were worked out by the pupils in the principal's room. Two new teachers were also put out by those who are proud of the excellent results. I am proud of the excellent results of this school has for many years—a class earning preliminary certificates, which are required for entrance into the high school, having been graduated each year. The last school year a class of six graduated. Five of them entered high school this month. The seventh grade all passed Regents in Geography, so not a single paper was rejected. That a desire for higher education was given the students is shown by the high percentage of the graduates who enter high school and remain to complete the course. Several entered colleges and a number are now giving splendid satisfaction as teachers in the public schools. Not alone for the school's scholastic attainment, but also for the character building which was regarded as the most important work to be accomplished, are the parents truly grateful.

Attention having been called by the article in The Freeman to the subject of text books in use for the past few years, I investigated and found that almost all of them were among the most highly approved books in use today. Several students have read fifty approved books last year, qualifying for a special reading certificate. All children in the principal's room were required to read good books and give reports on them. These were made more interesting by the children dramatizing certain parts which they selected.

The folly of the man who turns "unloaded" guns upon himself is exceeded only by that of the host who gives his guests "unloaded" guns to play with.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—The feminine bob is getting longer.

This was ascertained today at the National Hairstylists and Cosmetologists Association convention where leading stylists forecast fall and winter hair styles.

The new bob is from an inch and a half to two inches below the natural hairline, where it stopped this summer, said Louis Prange, president of the Coiffure's Guild of New York.

But it is the difference in the fall silhouette that is going to make this summer's bob look as out-of-date as last winter's hat, it was learned from this expert.

The new bob has a backward and upward sweeping line, as he described it, and it fluffs out in back yet manages to maintain a line shaped to the head.

One ear mark of the new bob consists of exposed aural appendages, which, because they have been so long hidden beneath hair, hats and baring caps as to be pale should be rouged and powdered, he said. The ends of the new bob will be finished in round finger curls.

He stressed that where formerly the side ends were curled toward the face, they are now curled away, which gives that new backward and upward line. Where formerly waves on the sides of the head were set almost horizontally, they are now placed in the hair at a decided angle.

A Chic Shirtwaist

Frock for General Wear

A chic shirtwaist of this simple cut and design is shown in line. This is the latest in the general line of the new shirtwaists.

The new shirtwaist is the simple cut and design of the general line. The general line shows a tendency toward a tailored and a complete absence of the decorative details that characterized similar dresses of this type last summer. The simple construction of this model is relieved from fussiness by a little feminine touch placed at just the right angle to give the silhouette its proper outline. The round turn-over collar is soft and dappering—very different from last summer's severe ones. In the front there is an intriguing little cut-out which is not so large as not to permit of concealment by a bow should the wearer so wish. Pockets at the hip-line give interest in that quarter. The new sleeve is here seen to good advantage. Action pleats provide the means of supplying the wide look at the bottom. In sports and informal daytime dresses this type of sleeve is both new and popular. At the wrist it is finished off with a shirry cuff—very comfortable to wear. The skirt, like so many of the new ones, is quite without excitement, but for the optional slash in the front.

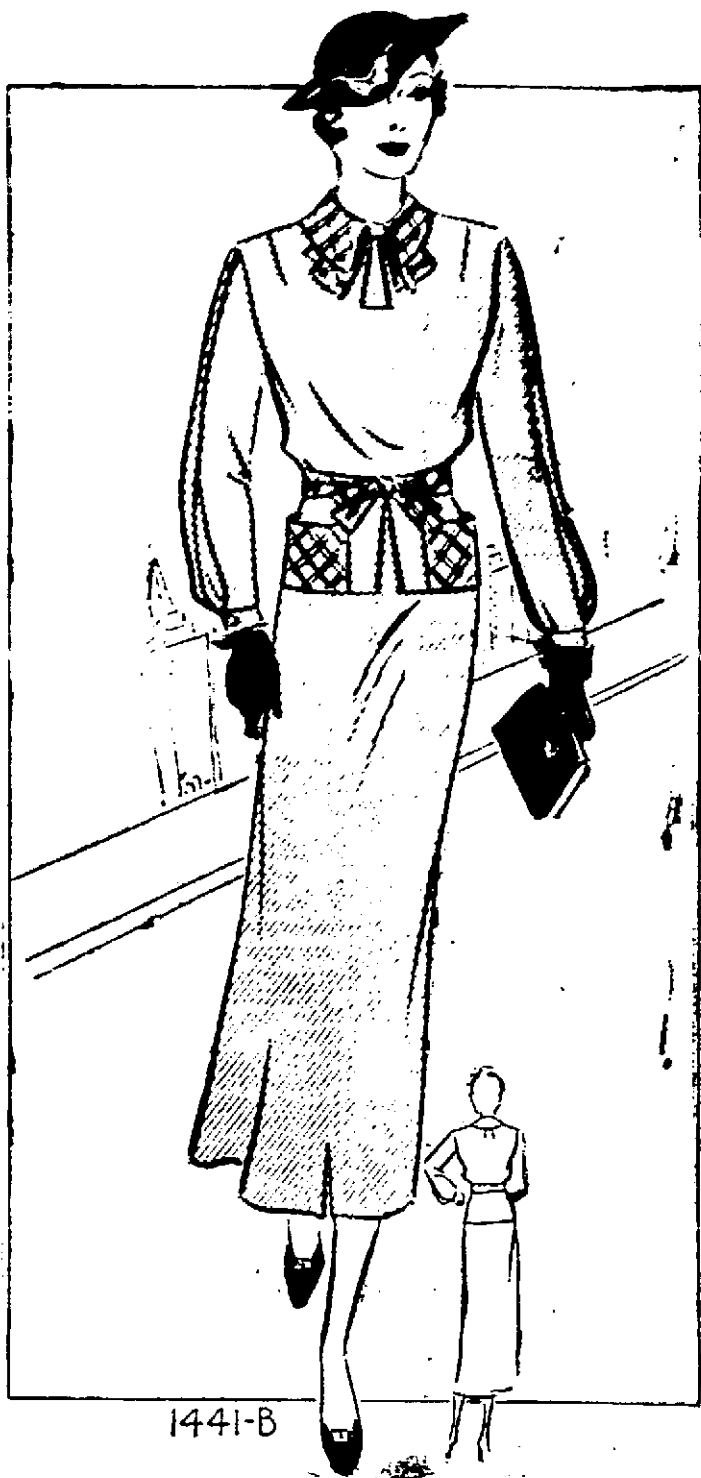

The silk designs are perhaps the most intriguing of the new silks for dresses that will see hard wear. The latest designs come in a wealth of smart colors, the leading ones of which are greens, ranging from moss, Empire, Veronese, Atchafalca and bottle, to Kelly and chow-chow. In browns we find beautiful warm shades including Malacca and mahogany. These combine attractively with the very popular beige touches. Garnet red, Cardinal, brick-red and all the wines are important together with terra cotta and burnt orange.

PEGGY: Come along, Mr. Powder Puff, you're a real pal to me—

PUFF: Sure I am now, Peggy. But in the old days—

PEGGY: The way I'd put on fresh make-up then, without getting all the old make-up out of my pores—

PUFF: Jump into bed with make-up on, too, and—

PEGGY: Didn't know I was risking Cosmetic Skin, then!

PUFF: Now you're removing stale cosmetics the Hollywood way—with Lux Toilet Soap. Before you put on fresh make-up—ALWAYS before going to bed at night, too!

PEGGY: Sure—I'm taking no chances with choked pores—they get enlarged—maybe blemishes and blackheads appear. No ugly Cosmetic Skin for me!

Childhood Chemistry Cites Copper, Calcium

Wisconsin Authority Says Children Often Lack Essential Constituents of Health in Diet—Asphalt and Tar Are Discussed.

Cleveland, Sept. 11 (AP)—New uses of science came with a bang at the American Chemical Society here today.

If the baby has a perfect diet, yet is sick, perhaps he needs copper. If you like bread crusts, it's all right to eat them but not if you want vitamin B1.

Asphalt causes cancer among mice, but apparently it is harmless to man, and certainly so in pavements. If the doctor prescribes calcium, there's a new better way of giving it in hypodermic "shots" called Calcium-Lerv-Gluconate.

The copper report was made by Dr. C. A. Allen of the Department of Agricultural Chemistry, University of Wisconsin, who studied the diets of 700 children.

He reported "we are compelled to believe that many supposedly well fed infants are slightly anemic and that their diets are deficient in iron or copper or both."

The effects of baking on vitamin B1 in bread were reported by Prof. Agnes Fay Morgan, of the University of California. She found that "there was a surprisingly small loss of vitamin produced by baking."

The exception was in the crusts of whole wheat bread. In them there was considerable loss of B1.

The studies of common substances of daily contact which tend to cause skin cancer were reported by Dr. Emil Bogen and Russell N. Loomis of the Olive View Sanatorium, Olive View, Calif.

They started with the well known medical fact that too much handling of rats induces cancer, even in man. Likewise they found that asphalt gave mice skin cancer, but not that its human uses are dangerous.

Calcium is given by physicians sometimes by hypodermic injection in cases of tetanus, severe rickets, calcium deficiency diseases. An ideal form of calcium has been lacking, according to a report by Dr. Frederick R. Greenbaum, of the National Drug Company, Philadelphia. He said that this ideal is at least approached by experiments with Calcium-Lerv-Gluconate.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

by Mollie Merck

Copyright, 1934, By The North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 10.—B. B. Montgomery and his wife, Betty, and Chester Morris and his masquerade in the circus parade. Whimsy? Yes, and they confide, the justification of a childhood's ambition.

With them, almost, went Helen Hayes, but at the last moment she had to make retakes. She is consoling herself with the promise that she will ride on the head of the biggest elephant at Madison Square Garden when the winter fun begins.

Rob and Chester were costumed as Arabs. Nobody knew who they were. They didn't have to sign any autographs, or take any bows. Who ever saw an Arab get anything but a raspberry in a circus parade? The two wires in chariots, with the usual dusty ribbons and dim spangles of the charioteers of the street parade.

Noel Coward stated this circus parade business. He starts a good deal of whimsy, this quaint fellow, but he does it in such a simple nice way and he can't tell the difference between himself in a picture that, for once, transcends the minor note of movie fame.

Little David Copperfield has not been fully decided upon as yet. A pretty well authenticated story that he had been at last found shimmered down into doubt and now seems to be spluttering out. A little chap from Northern California who looked as if he had all the necessary qualifications couldn't carry the dramatic end of it when it came to the scratch, and the present-top-notch possibility is a shabby nine-year-old from a local beach town tenement district who certainly has the dramatic quality, it seems, but how about that British accent?

Schools have been thrown open to the casting directors searching for a David. They have had the children of the state reviewed in the minimum of time, thanks to this courtesy. Even the minimum of time is costing the maximum of money.

Roland Young, back in Hollywood, is eating his heart out—but only because he must eat his way through his present role. Roland Young hates food. He can't tell the difference between a hot dog and a serving of Ecclesiastes Voltaire—really and truly.

"I eat to live," he means, as he takes demand that he keep consuming food in his role of a Russian prince; food brought him by Bing Crosby in his role of the waiter.

"Now Bing here, is always hungry. Why couldn't we have exchanged parts? It would have been a knock-out. I always hurry through luncheons and dinners so I may have more time to spend on truly entertaining things. This business of wasting hours of time and thought on food; this ghastly thing of spending hours a day at the table—I hate it, and what's more, I won't do it. That is, unless I am being paid splendidly for it—as in the present case."

Roland Young, one of the most truly humorous and sophisticated of Hollywood's intelligent group, thinks Elizabeth Bergner's performance of "Catherine the Great" is tops in screen performances. He has been away from Hollywood for over a year. Recently we have been receiving letters asking for news of him.

"News of me?" He laughed merrily. "Tell them I'm as tiresome as ever. That I like to play interesting things when I can get them and that I wish I could have more time before I begin them to find out what the character really is supposed to be and to do. That is why I prefer certain aspects of the stage."

All German Imports McManus Is Jailed In State of Control For Theft of Rugs

Whole System Will Be Placed in the Hands of the Government in Effort to Save the Depleted Currency.

Sept. 11.—(P)—All imports from Germany were declared subject to a state of control when the Reichsmark was revalued. The new system of import control was put into effect to save the government's depleted currency reserves. The national import control department will be increased to 25, thus putting the whole import system under the control of the government. The government's plan is to be put into effect in the near future, before the functions of the control department are fully organized.

The ministries of economics and agriculture will supervise the department for distribution of foreign currency permits. Requests for imports for use in the manufacture of products to be exported will be given first consideration.

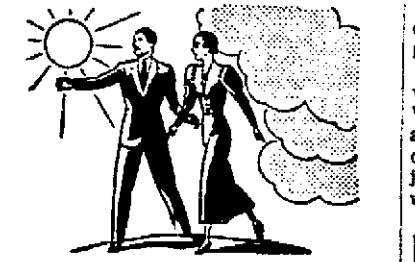

The value of materials which may be imported without a permit was reduced from 50 marks ($20) to 10 marks ($4).

The newly-created control department, instead of the Reichsbank, are authorized to issue permits beginning September 24. The regulations are designed to promote compensatory trade and to readjust Germany's foreign trade balance with countries like the United States which have a wide margin of imports to Germany.

Simultaneously, the measure is calculated by the government to foster an increase of export activity on the part of Germany.

Step out into the SUNSHINE

How many days of your life are lost in feeling under par? How many hours which might be bright are dull and despondent?

Halfhearted days are frequently due to common constipation. It clouds your waking hours, takes the sunshine out of living. Yet it can be overcome so easily by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's All-Bran provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid elimination. All-Bran is also a fine source of iron. The "bulk" in All-Bran is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this "cereal way" pleasanter than taking patent medicines?

Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal or use in muffins, breads, omelets, etc. In the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Found Guilty of Stealing Two Rugs From Helen Connolly—One Rug Recovered, But Other Still Missing—Other Cases in Police Court Today.

Nick McManus, of 178 Broadway, will spend the next 30 days in the county jail where he was sentenced by Judge Culliton after a hearing in police court this morning. McManus had been arrested on complaint of Helen Connolly, who resides in the adjoining house, and who accused Nick of stealing two small rugs valued at $100. In the evidence given at the hearing it developed that one of the rugs had been recovered from a family who had paid Nick the sum of 25 cents for the rug. The other rug is still missing. The two rugs had been thrown over the top of a fence in the backyard of the Connolly house, and when members of the family went out to bring them in it was found that one was gone.

McManus, on the witness stand told Judge Culliton that he had been drinking. He said he had been drinking his share of the house in which he lived over to a relative, and that the relative had removed all of the household goods with a few exceptions. He said he had two men with him and he decided to finish up the job. One of the men, he said, found the rugs on the fence and asked Nick if they were his. Nick said he told the man if the rugs were on his fence they were his.

Then, loaded down with odds and ends of furniture, Nick said he started to walk away from the house. Everyone he met, he said, who had ever purchased him a drink would shout at him. "Hey, Nick, throw me a stool, or throw me a rug," Nick said he sold most of the stuff but denied selling the rug. He had no recollection he said as to who got the rug or where the other rug had disappeared.

Riding with Heiser on the motorcycle was Joseph Grossman of High Falls, who received a deep scalp wound and an injured right foot, while Heiser received a dislocated ankle and bruised knees. ## Rogers Street Is Now One-Way Street

Some Motorists, However, Refuse to Obey Signs and Police Department Plans to Make Arrests—Stop Signs Also Not Observed.

On September 8, the common sense adopted an ordinance making Rogers street a one-way street, with entrance on Warts street and exit on Broadway. Suitable signs have been erected, plainly marked and lettered to that effect and an arrow placed indicating the direction in which traffic shall move over the street.

Since the adoption of the ordinance some motorists have observed the signs, but others have disregarded them entirely. Those interested in having traffic in this street moved with safety have been watching the lack of observance by certain individuals for some time past and the police department will begin to rigidly enforce the ordinance, and arrests will follow unless the traffic signs are observed and obeyed.

The same condition exists in regard to the stop signs placed on Adams and Rogers streets, which are to be observed by motorists and in the event that they are disregarded the police will make arrests.

To aid traffic in observing stop signs all over the city a white mark has been placed in the pavement at each stop sign location with the word "Stop" in large white letters, so that no one driving a car can fail to know that a stop sign is placed at that particular street intersection.

Drastic Vigilance Of Vessels In Havana

Havana, Sept. 11 (P)—Havana port officials today laid down orders for the drastic vigilance of all vessels in port, cancelling all passes to board the ships, as a step in the investigation of the Morro Castle disaster.

Capt. Oscar Hernandez, chief of the port police, said he was making excellent progress with his investigation and expected to announce definite results within two days.

"From now on," said Captain Hernandez, "nobody but a certain number of the crew and the port police on duty at the ships will be allowed to enter the vessels in the harbor."

"Even baggage porters are barred. They must deposit their baggage at the dock and certain designated members of the crew will come ashore and take on the baggage. We won't even let army and navy officers board the ships and the names of the crew men assigned to duty aboard the ships while they are in the harbor must be approved by the chief of customs."

The police chief said his best men were working on the Morro Castle case and he was pleased with the result so far. He said that thus far the United States government had not asked him for anything, but if he did have anything it was available to that government.

SOAPBOX ORATORY ENDS IN RIOT IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Sept. 11 (P)—Police counted a score of victims of a riot in "Bugge Square" where radicals go to speak on controversial subjects.

A crowd of 2,000 persons assembled to hear a soap box orator last night, when suddenly an automobile carrying four youths and two girls bore down on them, brushing them aside.

Angry men reached through the windows to pummel the youths, who drove away, only to return on foot a few moments later, two of them carrying revolvers.

They opened fire, and the terrorized crowd fled in all directions. Some were trampled underfoot; several ran into the path of automobiles and were knocked down. William Kersten, 78, a listener, was shot in the abdomen. Another man was slugged with a pistol butt.

Police, after an automobile chase, arrested four youths and two girls. Several of the spectators identified them.

AGRICULTURE DEPARTMENT PROBING INTERFERENCE

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 11 (P)—The New York state department of agriculture today started an investigation of the alleged interference by state police with photographers at the state fair grounds Sunday.

Captain Stephen McGrath, commander of Troop D at Oneida, was ordered by the superintendent of state police to be here today to report on the incident.

Charles H. Baldwin, commissioner of agriculture and markets, said he had also asked Dan Ackerman, director of the fair, to make a report.

The photographers said troopers clubbed one man on the wrist, broke his camera, removed his plates and confiscated the cameras of others. They said representatives of the American Automobile Association directed the troopers to stop them when they attempted to take pictures on a minor accident in the 100-mile national dirt track championship race.

Not For Bonneton Fought. Sept. 11 (P)—State Senator Frederic H. Bonneton, commencing today on the Republican state chairmanship, for which position he has been mentioned, said: "I would not accept it under any consideration. I am entirely interested in what I am doing now and wouldn't think of accepting the position."

Mrs. William Kemble Injured. Mrs. William Kemble of No. 113 Clinton avenue met with a very painful accident on Saturday last. While walking on a slippery concrete sidewalk, she slipped and fell heavily, wrenching the tendons of the back. While resting more easily Mrs. Kemble will be disabled for some time.

Code Compliance Aide, A.R. Glancy, May Resign Because Of Dissension

Decision is Said to Be Based on Hang-Over from Harriman, Tenn., Hosiery Mills Dispute in July.

DOZEN LEAVING Johnson's Disapproval of Glancy's Settlement with Mills Over Blue Eagle Status is Cause.

(Copyright, 1934, By The Associated Press)

Washington, Sept. 11.—The resignation of A. R. Glancy as assistant NRA administrator for code compliance was reported in informed circles today to be imminent as the result of dissension within the recovery organization.

This development in the long internal disagreement over settlement of the Harriman (Tenn.) hosiery mills dispute came while Hugh S. Johnson conferred with President Roosevelt over reorganization plans. The controversy goes back to July, when the Blue Eagle was restored to the Harriman mills under an agreement negotiated by Glancy.

Johnson, then away on a speaking tour, and George L. Berry, division administrator who had participated in settlement negotiations, expressed disapproval of the action.

The resignation of a division administrator also is impending, it was said, as a result of the latest disagreement between NRA and industry—which resulted last week in the resignation of the National Retail Solid Fuel Code Authority in a body.

More than a dozen others are leaving posts with research planning, and the labor advisory and the consumers advisory boards. Officials insisted the departures were not prompted by dissatisfaction with NRA but were rather a fall exodus of teachers and professors to resume old posts.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Do you, money talks, but what it says is "Goodbye."

One of my best girl friends is here at the beach looking for a husband.

What's his name?

Oh, she doesn't know yet.

Realists are having little to say these days. They've had time and opportunity to talk themselves to death.

The man I marry must be as brave as a lion, but not forward, as bold as an Apollo, but not conceited, as a Solomon, but meek as a lamb, a man who is kind to every woman, but only loves me!

By jove! How lucky we met.

The pretty young stenographer who marries her boss, must have found the typewriter keys to his heart.

Man—Girls, my wife had ten men after her until she married me.

One of the Girls—That must make you feel proud.

Man—No, they were bill collectors and now they're after me.

Isn't the amount of work that you do that causes you regret, it's the amount you leave undone.

Man—Have you ever seen a prize fight?

Neighbor—No, never, but I once looked in on my wife's afternoon bridge parties.

When a girl acts hungry for love she's probably eating her heart out for some boy.

First Woman—Well, I must be off. I've an appointment with mother.

Second Woman (giving an astonished laugh)—My dear, is it possible that you have a mother living?

First Woman (laughing in her turn)—Yes, oh, yes. And do you know, I don't believe she looks a day older than you.

Many men believe even yet, that a monopoly can fix its prices to suit itself. But it can't do it. The mere fact that a producer has no direct competition, doesn't keep his sales from shrinking to the point of ruin, if he insists on selling too high.

Man—Adam was created first.

His Wife—Well?

Man—And men have been waiting for their wives ever since.

When felicitations were recently extended a local bride, she responded dubiously, but candidly: "Well, so far, I'm happy, but you can't tell how long it will last."

First Movie Actress—My next picture is going to be a wonder picture.

Second Ditto—Yes, and everybody'll wonder why it was ever made.

Some young couples are inseparable until they are married.

Jerry—How did you get on in your action for compensation against the man whose dog bit you last month?

Perry—His lawyer proved I bit the dog.

To All Optimists: Go to your best friend, try to borrow $10; then go to your next best friend, your next best, etc., and see how you feel.

Friend—Have you a letter opener?

Man—Yes, my wife.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "Hat, Coat and Glove." With a hat, a coat and a glove as mute evidence to a murder crime, this tricky tale works itself into a high pitch of excitement in which the innocent party is almost convicted of murder, so devoid of loopholes is the evidence piled up against him. To make matters more dramatic, the man on trial is the lover of the wife of the man defending him. If such a thing seems within the realm of reason. This lawyer realizes the man is innocent but the idea churns about in his mind as to the advisability of letting him be proven guilty as a punishment for wife stealing. Ricardo Cortez, John Beal, Barbara Robbins, Dorothy Burgess and Margaret Hamilton are in the cast.

Orpheum: "Such Women are Dangerous." Excellent casting plus an enjoyable story both combine to make this picture above average. Warner Baxter plays the role of a novelist and Rochelle Hudson is a young poetess, madly in love with him. Romantic, clever and real, the picture moves along in flawless fashion from beginning to end. Mona Barrie is also in the cast.

Brooklyn: "Hide-Out." Producers tried to get the same electrifying atmosphere of "The Thin Man" in this picture of a big city racketeer who escapes the law and hides out on a farm. Because of the kindness of the farmer and his wife and because he falls in love with their daughter, he determines to take a new lease on life and go straight. The show has a lot of human appeal, some excellent comedy and its full share of exciting incidents. Robert Montgomery, in the starring role, turns in another enjoyable performance as the suave young racketeer, and others in the cast include Maureen O'Sullivan, Edward Arnold and Elizabeth Patterson. The direction was by W. S. Van Dyke.

Tomorrow

Kingston: "Kiss and Make-Up" and "Half a Sinner." Cary Grant, Genevieve Tobin, Helen Mack, Edward Everett Horton and the Wampus Baby Stars of 1934 complete the cast of the first attraction, an amusing musical romance that has its moments of excellence during the run of the film. It concerns the trials of a handsome beauty doctor whose clients fall in love with him. "Half a Sinner" is the second feature and it tells the tale of a deacon whose apparent innocence makes him the drawing card for gamblers, but these same gamblers find him a tough nut to crack. A romance runs through the picture with Joel McCrea and Sally Blaine in the featured roles.

Orpheum: "Palooka" and "Murder on the Campus." James Durante and Lupe Velez get along in gusty fashion in this story of a country yokel and his climb up the ladder of success through prize fighting. Stuart Edwin is the country boy who makes good and Robert Armstrong is also a member of the cast. The whole show was conceived in an effort to give Mr. Durante a chance to dust off some of his best antics, and it is pretty brisk entertainment as a whole. "Murder on the Campus" is well explained by the title. Shirley Grey and Charles Starrett are featured.

Broadway: "Return of the Terror." For sheer thrills, uninterrupted suspense, mystery and murder, here is a wow of a show that will bring chills to the spine from the start of the picture. The action takes place in an insane sanitarium, and what transpires there is one long shudder followed by another. Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot, John Halliday and Frank McHugh are in the cast.

Dealers Ready to Supply New Refrigerators

Inquiry today among local electric refrigerator dealers disclosed that most of them are now in a position to supply their customers with the newly developed low-priced electric refrigerator. Initial delivery of these new units has been slow owing to the vast amount of interest and demand they have created throughout the country.

These newly developed electric refrigerators are absolutely revolutionary both in design and price. Manufactured by six of the country's leading electric refrigerator builders, they represent a new conception in refrigeration convenience. They fill a long felt need and are just the thing for people whose refrigeration requirements are not large and those who cannot afford to buy the larger size refrigerators already on the market.

Including Delivery, Installation, One Year Free Service

Fits ANY Pocketbook

What an amazing electric refrigerator! The Crosley Chest Shelvador offers all that electric refrigeration means in health, economy and convenience—and it is priced so startlingly low that it is within reach of the most modest pocketbook. Ideal for homes, apartments, summer camps and cottages, as the second refrigerator in the home for the pantry or entertainment room. Has every essential Crosley Shelvador feature—the same, quiet, long-life trouble-free refrigerating unit—the sensational Shelvador feature with greatly increased "usable" capacity. COMPACT ARRANGEMENT AIDS IN FOOD STORAGE IN THE "LIFT TOP"

The reason this seemingly small unit holds so much food is because of its compact arrangement. There are two food storage spaces, the bottom and the sliding basket above. The basket can be moved from the back to the front, thereby making all the storage space available. The food stored in the "Lift Top" is enough for a family of four for a number of days.

Refrigeration manufacturers built these boxes for the express purpose of gaining maximum efficiency at lowest price. The most modern, scientific ideas of skilled engineers went into the construction of this new refrigeration unit, bringing refrigeration within the reach of everyone.

Abundance of Ice Cubes

Another feature of this small refrigerator unit is the ice freezing compartment. More than 2 pounds of ice cubes can be frozen in these units. The ice tray rests on a fast freezing refrigerated shelf so ice cubes can be frozen in surprisingly short time. In a test conducted by one manufacturer, the entire amount of ice was frozen in less than one hour and a half. This means that cubes can be frozen between meals, and in the event an additional supply is needed, cubes can be frozen and stored in the cabinet.

Kingston Dealers Have New Machines On Display

In keeping with President Roosevelt's request that modern appliances be brought within the reach of everyone's pocket book, the leading refrigerator manufacturers have placed a radical new model before the public, known as the "Lift Top" refrigerator. Its only difference from the present day type of electric or gas refrigeration lies in its new design and its much lower price. It was constructed to sell far below the cost of the ordinary refrigerator unit while at the same time losing none of the quality, service and general efficiency of the higher priced models.

The local dealers, advertising on these pages, recommend the new "Lift Top" refrigerator to those people who have felt that the cost of modern refrigeration was beyond their means. They invite you to visit their showrooms and view the new "Lift Top" models. They must be seen to be appreciated.

MANY UNIQUE FEATURES

The features of the new refrigerators are both unique and revolutionary. The unit is characterized by its compactness, being only about two feet square and three feet high, opening at the top. It will easily fit into places heretofore impractical for larger size cabinets. This new unit will easily fit under a window without obstructing the light. As the cabinet is waist-high, it can be utilized as a work table.

LOW OPERATING COST

Owing to the fact that the space to be cooled in this new unit is smaller, operating cost is lower than any other refrigerator now on the market. Tests conducted by one manufacturer show that the kilowatt-hour consumption under average circumstances will run only approximately 20-25 kilowatt-hours per month. The refrigerator runs only about 15% of the time.

NEW UNIT HAS VARIED USES

Aside from its use in homes where refrigeration demands are small, these new units are filling a long felt need in supplying proper refrigeration in summer camps and cottages; doctors' offices for keeping serums, anti-toxins, etc.; road stands and small restaurants; barber shops for cold towels; locker rooms at golf clubs; and beauty parlor uses. There are many other uses not listed, but wherever compactness, portability, low price and low operating costs are essential, these newly developed refrigerators have a place.

FROZEN DESSERTS

The ice tray in this new unit is large enough for making practically any sort of frozen dessert that can be made in the standard size electric refrigerator. The tray will hold a full quart of ice cream.

Ample space is also available for the storage of milk or beverage bottles. Incidentally, the unit will hold practically a case of pint bottles of beer.

Riot Breaks Forth In Pennsylvania Center, Disorders Widespread

Police Squadrons Showed Defiance In North Carolina—National Guard Mobilized In Three New England States.

By The Associated Press.

Violence broke out anew in several centers today as the national guard mediation board dispersed the strike with manufacturing.

At Lancaster, Pa., was the scene of a riot. More than 1,000 pickets and strikers stormed a mill, and half a dozen workers and strikers were injured.

At the Cannon Towel Mills at Harrisburg, N. C., 1,200 pickets—armed with clubs—surged, shouting, "Fighting them were 300 special guards and militiamen armed with bayonets and tear gas, and machine guns mounted atop the mills. The strikers' leaders said it was a demonstration to Cannon was the strike's strength." The strikers dispersed after the demonstration. In the ranks were strikers from Gastonia, Concord, Salisbury and Greenville, who arrived in a motorcade.

Three New England states National Guard troops were mobilized for the first time since the textile strike was called.

Two Providence, R. I., armories equipped a "skeleton regiment" of 100 National Guardsmen. In Hartford, Conn., two companies were ready to move to Williamstown, where 1,000 strikers massed yesterday for picket duty, and two companies mobilized at Lewiston, Me.

The Rhode Island troops were prepared to move to the Sayles Finishing Company plant at Saylesville, where two persons were shot and about 25 injured in rioting yesterday.

The early shift entered the plant without incident today. State police yesterday battled the mob for hours, repeatedly laying down tear gas barbed.

Disorder broke out in Bridgeport, Pa. Several persons were slightly injured when employees of a plant attempted to report for work.

Another tense spot was High Point, N. C., where six strikers suffered flesh wounds from soldiers' bayonets in a clash late last night.

Manufacturers' representatives who discussed the strike with the President's mediation board were confronted with labor's "deadline" in its arbitration proposal: 5 p. m., eastern standard time, today.

Under the proposal, both sides would accept the board's decision, and all mills would be closed during the negotiations.

In the Carolinas, where 105,000 workers are out, fifty National Guard units were on duty. But the crushing picket motorcades were diminishing. John Peel, of Greenville, S. C., southern strike director, said he had given orders for the "dying squadrons" in that state to disperse.

"I knew if they didn't, it meant danger," he said.

The United Textile Workers intensified its efforts to close Georgia mills, where 40,500 textile workers already were idle.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—Financial markets shifted through an irregular performance today.

Stocks were quite lively in the first hour of so, with overnight selling orders in the metals shaking this group down 1 to 3 or more points.

Support appeared for the more depressed issues later, however, and early losses were more than cancelled in several instances.

U. S. government securities generally pointed downward in the face of further study of the treasury's new financing program.

Shares of U. S. Smelting, after being off nearly 4 points; recovered for a gain of 1. Howe Sound, Cerro de Pasco and American Smelting also came back for advances of fractions to around a point. Liggett & Myers B got up a point, while Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, N. Y. Central, Case, Loew's, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Johns-Manville, Montgomery Ward and National Distillers were a trifle higher. Allied Chemical yielded a point, as did Evans Products. U. S. Steel, American Can, Du Pont, Sears Roebuck, Western Union, Union Pacific and many others were unchanged to slightly lower.

STONE-AGE STATUE FOUND IN SCOTLAND

Relic Superior to Figurines of Continent.

Glasgow, Scotland, Sept. 11.—A stone statue, which is a relic superior to the figurines of the continent, was found in Scotland.

Not to speak of other relics brought to light during the last five years, this latest find is superior to the figurines of the continent, which are found in the Paleolithic rock shelters of the continent. It is well proportioned and skillfully cut out of a large, hard reddish-brown pebble of igneous rock.

Fertility Goddess, Perhaps It is thought to be a representation of some goddess, perhaps the Mother Divinity of Fertility. The arms, hands and even fingers are accurately portrayed and are laid across the chest, while the waist recalls that of the Venus of Milo.

"The valley gravels have been the scene of research work during the last five years by a body of Scots prehistorians," he continues. "They have been richly rewarded, as the beds have yielded many ancient relics, all water-worn and often ice-scratched, such as fragments of mammoth tusks and rhinoceros bones and teeth.

"The thigh bone of a young rhino has been recovered, skillfully carved into shape for use as a smoothing tool. It strengthens the evidence of the joint presence at a remote period of man and the great mammalia in North Britain.

"Moreover, scores of finely outlined, symmetrically fashioned stone implements have also been found in the same deposit. They are made of native Scottish rock material and none is of flint, which is so rare in Scotland.

Period of the Relics "All the relics belong to the older stone age and some date from the pre-Paleolithic stage. Many students now believe that northern areas, such as Scotland and Scandinavia, were inhabited by Paleolithic man in no scanty numbers during numerous interglacial epochs which intervened between the glacial periods. It is also believed that he used within these areas the native rocks and pebbles (excluding flint) for the fashioning of tools and weapons, of which he had an extensive kit. In Scotland some fifty different types of implements have been noted.

"I have found this year in non-glaciated areas in southern Europe weapons and tools identical with those from Scotland and made from native rocks. I have brought to London some 500 specimens from Italy, the Balearic Islands, and Morocco. Both the Scottish and Italian artifacts conform precisely to the newly elucidated scale of linear measures, of which many gauges have been found recently in both territories."

Replacement of Cable

Is Engineering Feat

Boulder City, Nev.—One of the unusual exploits in the construction of the gigantic Hoover dam is the replacement of the huge cables stretching across the dam site.

The cables are used to convey men, concrete and other materials in building Uncle Sam's most ambitious water and power project. It is necessary to stop all operations for 48 hours to replace the cables.

Wound on huge spools, the cables, each weighing 55,000 pounds, are placed near the head tower of the cableway and one end is strung to and through the top of the tower.

The new cable is dragged across the canyon and fastened to the old steel rope. After the new cable is secured by supports which also hold the old cable the used steel rope is hauled away.

Each cable is 2,500 feet in length and costs approximately $10,000.

Short Radio Ray Hailed as Snake Bite Remedy

Paris.—Effective use of short wireless waves to cure bites of vipers, rattlesnakes, copperheads and moccasins was announced to the Academy of Sciences here by Mme. Marie Phisalix and Prof. Francois Pasteur.

The rays, the scientists said, transformed neurotoxin, the principal toxic ingredient of snake bites, to such an extent that in three cases out of four its effect was offset. Hemorrhaging, the other toxic ingredient, was not affected, they said.

Coal Hole Furnishes

Water Supply for City

Washington, Mo.—A 1,000-foot hole drilled here 50 years ago by citizens hoping to strike coal is furnishing Washington with water since the hot weather dried up streams and springs. The deep hole, uncovered by an old-time resident, who remembered it had filled up with water before being cemented, furnishes enough water for almost the whole town.

Eight States Holding Primaries Today With Choice Posts Sought

By The Associated Press

Eight states held primaries today, picking candidates for the November elections.

The states involved are Arizona, Colorado, Washington, Louisiana, Michigan, Vermont and New Hampshire, with South Carolina holding a run-off.

Approximately 2,000 National Guardsmen are encamped in New Orleans as Louisiana voters ballot.

New Orleans chooses between the political machines of Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

The principal contests in the state are those for congress.

In Colorado, Miss Josephine Roche, coal mine owner and social worker, seeks the Democratic nomination for governor from the incumbent, Edwin C. Johnson.

The New Deal was prominently mentioned in Washington where voters choose nominees for senator, congress and many state offices.

Two political veterans face opposition in the Arizona primary. One is Senator Henry F. Ashurst, seeking a fifth term. Four oppose him for the Democratic nomination. The other veteran is George P. Hunt, seven times governor, who seeks the Democratic nomination. He opposes Gov. B. B. Moeur.

Governor William A. Comstock, Democrat, is up for renomination in Michigan today, with opposition from two others. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg is opposed for the Republican senatorial nomination, while four seek the Democratic post.

Republican fights for senator and governor feature the Vermont primary. Senator Warren R. Austin is opposed for renomination by Former U. S. Attorney Harry B. Ames, Lieutenant Governor Charles M. Smith and Benjamin Williams, former holder of the same office, are seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

The New Hampshire primary is highlighted by the gubernatorial contest in both parties. Governor John G. Winant, recently named head of the textile mediation board, is not a candidate. H. Styles Bridges, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, and Charles E. Carroll, mayor of Laconia, seek the Republican nomination. George H. Dunham, Eaton D. Sargent and John L. Sullivan want the Democratic bid.

South Carolina will vote in a run-off primary for governor, deciding between Cole L. Blease, former governor and United States senator, and Olin D. Johnston, 34-year-old attorney.

Ten members constitute a quorum.

Mr. Terry, as honorary president, has presided at the meetings of the Association since the death of Palmer Canfield, who was president at the time of his death.

Sedatives Work Harm. Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP)—The use of some kinds of sedatives is held responsible by Dr. Charles H. Watkins of Rochester, Minn., for the development of leukopenia, a serious disease characterized by a deficiency of white blood corpuscles. Dr. Watkins who made a study of 45 cases, submitted his indictment of the use of sedatives before the Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology. In each case, he said, the patient reported the taking of some sedative of the type which has barbituric acid as its base.
